

FUTURE WITH “WILL”

We also use “will” for future actions, but usually for the following reasons:

1. When the future action is almost 100% certain to happen.
2. When the speaker is speaking with determination.
3. When the speaker promises to do something.
4. When the speaker offers to do something voluntarily.
5. When the speaker is making a prediction.

Examples:

She will come to my party.

(The speaker is certain that the girl will be at the party.)

I will pass the exam tomorrow because I studied very hard for it.

(The speaker is speaking with determination.)

I promise I will call you every day while I’m in Ecuador.

(The speaker has made a promise.)

I’ll help you fix your car.

(The speaker is offering to help someone voluntarily.)

Brazil will win The World Cup.

(The speaker is confident in their prediction.)

The structure is as follows:

SUBJECT	+ WILL	+ VERB IN INFINITIVE FORM	+ COMPLEMENTIZER
I	wil	call	my girlfriend.
You	wil	return	soon.
He	wil	climb	Mt. Everest tomorrow.
She	wil	go	dancing tonight.
It	wil	rain	tonight.
We	wil	buy	a new car.
They	wil	win	the game.

The pronouns can be contracted as follows:

I	I’ll	I’ll go to the store.
You	You’ll	You’ll feel better.
He	He’ll	She’ll call when she gets a chance.
She	She’ll	He’ll be back in one minute.
It	It’ll	It’ll be a great party.
We	We’ll	We’ll go to your house for dinner.
They	They’ll	They’ll come to visit us soon.

Note: The negative form of will is will + not = “won’t”.

Examples:

I won’t go to the store.

He won’t be back soon.

She won’t call you later, she’s got a meeting.

It won’t be a great party.

They won’t come to our house for dinner.

We won’t stay home for Christmas.

Note: Some common expressions that indicate the use of “will” are: I think, I am sure, probably, I am certain, and maybe.

Examples:

I think Ecuador will have a good future.

I’m sure she will go to the party.

He’ll probably go to the bar with his friends.

I’m certain I’ll pass the exam.

Maybe they’ll work overtime.

Note: When asking questions with “will” there are no changes in the verb, it stays in the infinitive form.

Examples:

Question: Will you be at the meeting later today?

Answer: Yes, I will.

Question: Will they go on vacation next year?

Answer: Yes they will.

Question: Do you think she will return to Ecuador?

Answer: No, I don’t think she will.

Question: Will she marry that guy?

Answer: No, she probably won’t.

Fill in the blanks with going to if (am-is-are) is present in the sentence. Use will if (am-is-are) is not present in the sentence. Follow the examples.
